

So much more than just a construction firm

Home is where the heart is, and research reveals that our physical surroundings can increase or reduce our stress and health.

Canterbrians have learnt this the hard way, but one locally-owned building company is still holding strong to its old-fashioned values – they don't just construct buildings, they nurture people and build homes that are pivotal to a family's sense of place.

It's all about keeping it real, says Dave Whyte, managing director of the family business Whyte Construction. While the team of highly qualified carpenters and supporting administration and management staff is close to 100, Dave stresses that it is a family business with people at the heart of everything they do. "We value our team, and in turn they value our clients. When you start a project with one of our teams, you have those people all the way through the project. We focus on quality and communication. We set the expectations at the beginning and then deliver well above them."

Dave knows that limiting the workload is part of the traditional values that ensures Whyte Construction is a builder of choice in the residential mid-market and architectural home category. "We do not over-commit so we can ensure every project receives the full attention of our people from start to finish."

Whyte Construction works across the residential, commercial and retail construction sectors and has a core stable of clients that have been with the company through its 17-year lifespan. Going into the

"We collaboratively develop solutions, and have resolved a large number of insurance related issues for many extremely satisfied clients."

New Year, Dave says it has capacity for more residential clients, working with people truly committed to building quality homes and residential repairs.

And in these times of uncertainty for many homeowners, Dave and his team provide project management and consultancy services in resolving insurance issues. "It's hard sometimes to know where to go for the right professional advice. We collaboratively develop solutions, and have resolved a large number of insurance related issues for many extremely satisfied clients."

Committed to people

To ensure it is always delivering the highest standard of work, the company substantially invests in development, staff training and equipment to support its focus for customer satisfaction and delivery of the highest quality build, on time with and in honour of its proven track record.

In the same way Dave selects committed clients, he also only hires committed, enthusiastic and suitably qualified trades people and project managers. As the rebuild surges ahead, Dave invites anyone with that old-fashioned work ethic and commitment to building homes, not just houses, to be in touch.
